

THINK LANGUAGE..THINK US
PTE|NAATI|IELTS

2. Essay (1-2)

- 20 minutes for each essay
- 200 – 300 words
- 15 points each

Essay Template - Version 1.1

This template is updated to include more keywords. It is completely fine to use version 1 as well

One of the most important trends of today's world is the sudden upsurge in the statement that "(essay topic)". There is a widespread worry that this will lead to a myriad of concerns in the world. This essay will discuss the advantages and disadvantages of the above statement which relates to the "main keywords from essay topic" using a pragmatic approach.

To commence with, there are several arguments in favour of my stance. The most important one not only includes betterment of the society but also includes the positive development of every individual on the planet. Because of the countless benefits, not only can one gain more when it comes to being successful and effective, but they can also improve their efficiency, productivity, and quality of life with a great deal of efficacy and convenience.

Another crucial factor in the aforementioned statement is that it is only likely to assist one to flourish, progress, and excel in a variety of fields and disciplines. Consequently, only when an individual adheres to such a system, they can expand their horizons, skills and acquire qualities such as commitment, dedication, and perseverance. Hence, it is evident why many are in favour of "(main keyword from the topic)".

Lastly, in my opinion, the government of Australia is taking a great initiative in educating its citizens against the negative impacts of the statement that "(essay statement)". Citizens are being encouraged to follow the applicable laws as well as rules and regulations to promote prosperity, productivity, efficiency, and a positive environment in the world.

*If the essay has 2 or more statements, make sure you include keywords from all the statements.

THINK LANGUAGE..THINK US
PTE|NAATI|IELTS

Internet has changed the way people communicate in the present world, but has some adverse impacts. What is your opinion?

One of the most important trends of today's world is the sudden upsurge in the statement that "Internet has changed the way people communicate in the present world, but has some adverse impacts". There is a widespread worry that this will lead to a myriad of concerns in the world. This essay will discuss the advantages and disadvantages of the above statement which relates to the "way people communicate on internet" using a pragmatic approach.

To commence with, there are several arguments in favour of my stance. The most important one not only includes betterment of the society but also includes the positive development of every individual on the planet. Because of the countless benefits, not only can one gain more when it comes to being successful and effective, but they can also improve their efficiency, productivity, and quality of life with a great deal of efficacy and convenience.

Another crucial factor in the aforementioned statement is that it is only likely to assist one to flourish, progress, and excel in a variety of fields and disciplines. Consequently, only when an individual adheres to such a system, they can expand their horizons, skills and acquire qualities such as commitment, dedication, and perseverance. Hence, it is evident why many are in favour of "internet which changed the way people communicate in the present world".

Lastly, in my opinion, the government of Australia is taking a great initiative in educating its citizens against the negative impacts of the statement that "Internet has changed the way people communicate in the present world, but has some adverse impacts". Citizens are being encouraged to follow the applicable laws as well as rules and regulations to promote prosperity, productivity, efficiency, and a positive environment in the world.

THINK LANGUAGE..THINK US
PTE|NAATI|IELTS

The government says that parents should be held legally responsible for their child's act. What do you think of this notion?

One of the most important trends of today's world is the sudden upsurge in the statement that "The government says that parents should be held legally responsible for their child's act". There is a widespread worry that this will lead to a myriad of concerns in the world. This essay will discuss the advantages and disadvantages of the above statement which relates to the "parents should be held legally responsible for their child's act" using a pragmatic approach.

To commence with, there are several arguments in favour of my stance. The most important one not only includes betterment of the society but also includes the positive development of every individual on the planet. Because of the countless benefits, not only can one gain more when it comes to being successful and effective, but they can also improve their efficiency, productivity, and quality of life with a great deal of efficacy and convenience.

Another crucial factor in the aforementioned statement is that it is only likely to assist one to flourish, progress, and excel in a variety of fields and disciplines. Consequently, only when an individual adheres to such a system, they can expand their horizons, skills and acquire qualities such as commitment, dedication, and perseverance. Hence, it is evident why many are in favour of "parents to be held legally responsible for their child's act".

Lastly, in my opinion, the government of Australia is taking a great initiative in educating its citizens against the negative impacts of the statement that "The government says that parents should be held legally responsible for their child's act". Citizens are being encouraged to follow the applicable laws as well as rules and regulations to promote prosperity, productivity, efficiency, and a positive environment in the world.

